A: I guess it's not possible, since one of the requirements for iegemobile is that the.DOC files need to be converted to.ISO. So this way, you would need two PC, and the first one will be the one that you purchase the ebooks from. However, since drm removal is a hobby which I do for fun, I could give you some information on how to achieve it: When the purchase the ebook, find the name of the file in the.DOC file and replace it with.ISO. Launch an archive archiver on the computer where the.ISO file was created, right click and choose "Open with" then select your archiver and "add archive" Now the.ISO will be available. It will contain the same exact content of the.DOC file you just edited, but it won't have any kind of DRM protection on it. On the ebook you can then play it normally as long as your ebook is region free. Of course this method will remove ALL the kindle and adobe digital editions DRM, but I have never been able to find a method to protect your books only to Kindle DRM. MTV Documentary Series Set to Launch 'Lidatious,' a Digital Social Experiment on Public Relations Founded in 1961, the public relations industry celebrated its 50th anniversary in 2009. To mark the occasion, MTV has announced plans for a series of documentaries to examine how the sector is changing. MTV's "ReGeneration: The Public Relations Industry" will broadcast nine one-hour episodes at a variety of public-relations-focused events that will be held all over the world. The program is being produced with The PR Writing Room of New York and London and will be narrated by celebrity spokesman and former MTV personality Paris Hilton. The documentary will be aired for a week before being posted in an online community, complete with user interaction. The series will be run on MTV's Oxygen network, the flagship cable network for women, as well as its sibling networks MTV2, MTV Hits and MTV Tr3s. "ReGeneration: The Public Relations Industry" is being produced by MTV Films in association with The Wachowski sisters' Anugami, New York, London and Telluride. Additionally, the network is partnering with PRSA, the largest trade association for public relations professionals in the U.S., to distribute the documentary in a

Grenfell Tower fire: 70,000 boost to charity of refuge With about 70,000 people now staying in hotels and guesthouses around the country – more than what the union’s official guideline recommends – Unite the union has written to the prime minister calling for the government to act by establishing some kind of official refuge for those displaced by the fire, reports the BBC. And Unite wants the government to allocate additional funds to help those affected pay for their accommodation, as well as promising to mobilise the unions' members and branches to volunteer their time to "ensure a strong response in terms of volunteer support". The letter states: "The tragic loss of life in the Grenfell Tower fire is a shocking event, and the government must do everything possible to ensure that no one is left without accommodation. "The government must act to assure that those who have lost their homes and are now needing help can get the help they need. "We believe that the government must act swiftly and expand the Homes from Home scheme so that the refugees can get started and start to rebuild their lives. "We also welcome the ongoing commitment by the government to support those affected. We are particularly pleased that the government is also looking to support the wider community affected by the fire. "However, as of today, with around 70,000 people now staying in hotels and guesthouses across the country, we must ask the government to act to expand or to set up a dedicated collective response to support those affected. "We are deeply concerned about reports that the response from the Metropolitan Police is insufficient and that it is not even asking people who are living in hotels and guesthouses to make their details available. "The Met are the lead in tackling this situation and of course we want to ensure that the proper response and investigation takes place. We also want to ensure that the police follow through on their promise to identify and charge the perpetrators of this crime
