Patients with psoriatic arthritis (PsA) have a greater risk of hip pain and disability than those with arthritis associated with other forms of spondyloarthropathy (SpA). We examined the characteristics of hip pain and disability in patients with PsA. Data from a physician survey of 1,747 patients with PsA, revealed that 24.5% of patients reported hip pain at least sometimes and 15.6% had a hip disability score of 3. Patients who had hip pain reported more pain, greater disability, greater arthritis activity, more back pain and poorer patient global assessment. These patients were also more likely to be using a walking aid than patients without hip pain. Patients with PsA have a high prevalence of hip pain and disability. These data suggest that further studies are needed to elucidate the pathogenesis and therapies for PsA-associated hip pain.John G. Hennessey John G.
