Lost Wing supports the following hardware: * Xbox One with games released on or after November 2, 2014 * Xbox 360 * PlayStation 4 * Android * iOS (iPhone and iPad) See Q: Why is water not stable in the ground? For example: The ground is warmer than the water in it. So, the water attempts to find an equilibrium in which it maintains its density as less heat is lost to the environment. Now, my question is why isn't the water in the ground more stable? A: This is a topic about electrolytes, such as sodium chloride. Your explanation of the problem is a good one, but it doesn't point out the cause of instability. You say the ground is warmer than the water. The best way to proceed is to think about how a liquid conducts heat. The heat travels through a fluid (liquid, gas, or plasma) by electrons moving in the liquid from one molecule to another, which have a non zero free path for moving away from each other. If the liquid has an overall motion, the free path will have a drift velocity for the motion. The average free path of the electrons in a given region will be a function of temperature, and the drift velocity is the sum of the drift velocity due to thermal agitation (which is proportional to temperature) and the drift velocity due to bulk motion (which is proportional to the net drift velocity). When the drift velocity is added to the thermal velocity, we get \bar{v} , the drift velocity divided by the thermal velocity: $\bar{v} = \sqrt{v_{th}^2 + \frac{\Delta v_{bulk}^2}{3}}$ The thermal velocity v_{th} is proportional to the inverse of the square root of the absolute temperature T : $v_{th} = \sqrt{\frac{3kT}{m}}$ where k is the Boltzmann constant, and m is the mass of an electron. The drift velocity due to bulk motion

The bomb went off in Lashkargah's Mes Aynat (Martyrs) Square, as a large crowd was gathering after the Friday afternoon prayer. Some of the wounded have been taken to nearby hospitals. The Taliban claimed responsibility for the attack. The secretary general of the provincial council confirmed that at least 61 people had been killed in the attack. Gulalai Kalimzai, a spokesman for the governor of Helmand, put the death toll at 50. "The suicide car bomb attack targeted a main gathering of the people following Friday prayers, killing 45 militants as well as seven civilians," the governor's spokesman Mohammad Jan Rasuli told Al Jazeera. The attack comes as part of a broader Taliban offensive in the country, as the group battles to regroup after their near-defeat by US-backed Afghan forces and the army and police last year. The Taliban have stepped up their attacks since the start of the year and this month they seized Kunduz, Afghanistan's largest city c9d1549cdd

What's new:

Guns N' Boxes: Gun Poops is a board game designed by Brian Ancell, Kevin Webb, and Eric Brinkman. Set in Africa during the late 1700s, it's based on a series of unrelated online auctions with Intrade, and unlike the first board game in the series, Cruisin' the West, there is no trading in Money. Settlements The boardgame starts with the Desert People, who are collectors of mementos of the Great Spirit. Next is the White Trader, who needs guns and ammunition. He is joined by his two Black Pawn allies, Van Wagon. The White Trader is represented by a large hollow game piece, while the four Pawns are small flat pieces representing billiard-type balls. By far the most important pieces are the basic Gun and Ammunition cards, for which numerous wildcard upgrades and synergies exist. Other members of the cast include a second large tireless hollow game piece from the Mountain People, who are collectors of salt, dried berries, and flint. Also present are the small sacks and wooden baskets of the Sea People, who bring porpoises, turtle, and oar, which provide transport, trading, and augmentation of Cunoa in player-owned settlements. The final members of the cast are the apemen, the tall and angular humans of the Grass People, who bring forth corn and rains. Their settlements are most heavily fortified, and they are the most useful in terms of trade and for defense. Gameplay At the beginning of the game, players start with a paper bag containing five cards, representing the bounty and station they will start with: Agriculture, Guns, Black Hand, Wood, and Explosives. All cards but the black hand and explosives have a starting Cunoa value of one, while the explosive cards double. The only cards that do not have Cunoa values in the game are the black hand, which is the starting condition, and the Cunoa card, which is not part of the game. After shuffling the cards, the players are given a hand of five cards from the bag, as well as their starting condition. The hand is split evenly between the four players, and must be identical by suit; at any time, a player may request any card, provided they have both the Cunoa and a corresponding slot to put the card in. When given a hand, players must decide whether to burn a card now,

In a world whose year is divided into decades, everyone is living in the first decade. Everyone lives in the same world, but not the same city, not in the same country, not even the same continent. Over time the city and land continues to grow, but the people are getting more and more isolated. Because of the 'atmospheric' gravity, the cities and towns are constantly spinning, making them look as if they are in space. There are no connections between the people and the cities, and the cities and towns continue to grow more independent. Each decade has its own rules and laws, no one knows about the next decade and their rules, laws and mores. There are no work places anymore, just some places where people are playing. With radio, TV and the Internet it is possible for everyone to be in touch with everything that is happening, everywhere. The people are constantly working, trying to progress, to win over the society and themselves. Every ten years, a kid is born, the next generation to come into this world. This kid, this generation, they are the first to experience something new. This generation, this 'true' generation, is the first generation who came to know the truth - that all the world can be replaced by some money. Nothing that is happening has a meaning anymore, for them, nothing is 'real' anymore. What is happening will never be important for them. There is no point in holding a normal job when nothing is important. This generation is the first generation that went to school. This generation that has been playing computer games, that has seen movies in the cinema, that has watched television, that has surfed the World Wide Web. This generation has gotten a world that is so different from the world ten years before that they do not know where to start. And they are not afraid of going off the beaten path. This generation has knowledge that people ten years before the start would be proud of. But the people who live before the first decade started will probably not be able to understand this generation and their thoughts, because they do not have the knowledge to understand it. Their world is not as different, is not as 'special' as this generation's world. -- We are going to tell
