This new technology significantly increases the impact of player movement, bringing a new dimension to the style of football and the ability to speed up the tempo of a match. Developed by DICE for FIFA in collaboration with the EA SPORTS Advanced Media Lab team, "HyperMotion Technology" uses real-world player movements to improve the tactical gameplay of the game. Among other things, "HyperMotion Technology" introduces an AI system that adapts the pace of the game according to the player's technical abilities and the tactical situation. Also new to the FIFA franchise is the "Sensations" feature - a new camera-based viewpoint that allows fans to feel like they are on the pitch. The new camera system combines a number of "enhanced camera perspectives" including the FIFA World Cup angle, the close-up view, and the traditional first-person view. A total of 18 leagues will be featured in FIFA 22. The "Legend" feature has been enhanced to include over 600 legends in Football and added the ability to "click" any player on the team sheet to view his stats, career and awards. The End-of-Match Quirks feature enables players to view and re-balance an upcoming game. The game also includes several new game modes, including the new "The Journey" story mode where you take the role of new players coming into the Premier League and rise through the ranks. "The Journey" offers new modes such as "Quick Play" and "The Journey" where you only need to download one update to access new content. You can also check out "My Team" to create your fantasy team of the Premier League players. A new online play system enables you to play against friends and other people from all over the world to compete in leagues including the Champions League. Lastly, there are over 500 new kits for players to choose from. "Crazy" is the working title for FIFA 22, and can be seen in the new trailer, which will be released later this week. A variety of EA SPORTS titles will be available at launch, including FIFA 18 and FIFA 18 Ultimate Team on PlayStation 4 and Xbox One. The FIFA 18 season pass will also be available for purchase at launch.
